
Alexandria Byas Biography 2013

Alexandria Byas, from Macon, Georgia, is a third year Public/Corporate emphasis veterinary student at The University of Georgia College of Veterinary Medicine. During her undergraduate education, she studied Avian Biology in The University of Georgia Poultry Science Department. This summer, she was able to participate in the Smith-Kilborne Foreign Animal Disease Student Training Program at Cornell University and Plum Island. After veterinary school, Alex is interested in pursuing a pathology residency. She is particularly interested in investigating the infectious diseases of food animals.