Master Public Health (MPH) College of Human Medicine (CHM)

Hello, My name is Erez Gueta, I'm a 35 years old 3rd year veterinary student at Michigan State University College of Veterinary Medicine. I was born and raised in the southern Israeli city Beer-Sheva. I've completed my high school education in 1996 with a biology and Arabic focus. I enlisted to the Israeli Defense Forces Army (IDF) at the age of 18 and served in a combat unit for three years. In November 1999 I was discharged with honors. I moved to the U.S. at the age of 23, lived in Los Angeles, California and worked in the construction and moving industries in different physical labor jobs. But I didn't see my future there, so I decided to pursue a career that I have a real passion for, and that's veterinary medicine. I started at the pre-veterinary program at Los Angeles Pierce College in 2007, and completed my course work at 2011. During my undergraduate years I also worked as a veterinary technician in different veterinary settings, which gave me a broad perspective on the profession. I was admitted to Michigan State University College of Veterinary Medicine at Fall 2011. During my first two years at Michigan State University I was exposed to the vast career possibilities veterinarians have outside of private practice. From food safety, and disease eradication in animal populations to investigating foodborne outbreaks and zoonotic diseases; veterinarians play a major role in keeping our animals, environment, and humans healthy. I'm glad to be interested in this field, and excited to see where my interest and education will lead me. I have great confidence in my ability to complete veterinary school and become a working professional who has the strong will to benefit society. Thank you all for your help and support.

Erez
