Jill Wilson Bull

I grew up in Franklin, TN in a home with both of my parents as veterinarians. They have both inspired me to enter the world of veterinary medicine, but I also realized that my desire to be involved with the health of animal species was generated from my love of the world that God created. I am fascinated with the pathogenesis of disease and a pathogen's ability to potentially cause diseases that can affect domestic animals, wildlife or humans. I am also extremely passionate about conservation and retaining species in the wild. My husband, Kevin, and I enjoy the outdoors with our two dogs Moose and Bear. We plan on moving to Anchorage, AK when my veterinary training is complete!
