
Jessica Wong Biography 2013

I am a 3rd year student at the University of Georgia College of Veterinary Medicine. My career interests include public health, infectious disease, and wildlife research. After veterinary school, I plan to apply to pathology residencies so that when I graduate, I can contribute in the public health and infectious disease research sectors, and improve not just human health, and not just animal health, but our health. My dream job is to work either in academia with both teaching and research components, or as a pathologist working for the United Nations or at the state level. While not in class or lab, I enjoy running and hiking with my Border Collie mix, Sgt. Pepper. Thank you for the opportunity to attend the 2013 USAHA/AALVD Conference – I look forward to being inspired.
