
Natalie Blackmer Urie

Natalie is a second year student at Colorado State University where she is enrolled in the dual Master's of Public Health and Veterinary Medicine Program. She is also a USDA Saul T. Wilson, Jr. scholar and works at the USDA NAHMS office in Fort Collins, CO. Natalie's previous experience includes various research projects with government entities in the United States and abroad. Natalie's professional interests include food animal medicine, preventative medicine, food safety, zoonotic disease, and public health. After graduation Natalie plans to continue a career in veterinary public practice.